THE DEMOCRACY

More About the War Between Kelly and Tilden.

John Will Show up Samuel in a Pamphlet,

And Distribute them Among People at Cincinnati.

The Consideration of the Ute Indian Bill in the House.

The Efforts of the Democrats to Adjourn Before the Cincinnati Convention.

Suicide of the Secretary of the Japanese Legation at Washington.

The Union Veterans Pouring into Milwaukee.

THE DEMOCRACY.

WASHINGTON, June 6—News received here from New York by the anti-Tilden Democrats goes to show that Kelly has relinquished one of his opposition to Tilden, and that in the event of the nomination of the latter at Cincinnati he would probably organize another independent Democrat ticket against him or form a more aggressive movement to secure Tilden's defeat. It is said, as a part of the Kelly plan against Tilden, a pamphlet is about ready to be issued and 200,000 copies will be sent over the United States giving a full record of Yelly Convention at Syracuse, the peace resolution offered to the Tilden Convention and rejected, the suppressed minority report of the convention, and a variety of other spicy reading. The Washington Post, in this morning has an interview with John Kelly, in which the latter, speaking of Tilden's chances says: "His nomination is not probable or even possible. The two-thirds rule will defeat him. The feeling in this State against his nomination is stronger to-day that it was a year ago.

Every effort would be made by his opponents to defeat his nomination, knowing that, if he were the nominee, it would mean simply political defeat and disaster. He has not been a wise or a prudent leader. It is too late for him to effect a reconciliation. The most influential and best known Democrats in this State will vote against him, and will continue to oppose his aspiration for the Presidency."

THE HOUSE.

The Ute Bill—The Question of Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—To-morrow an effort will be made to pass the Ute bill in the House. It provides that the Indians shall forfeit their lands in Colorado unless they deliver the murderers of the Meeker family and others during the late trouble within six weeks. It is not expected that the Indians will do anything of the kind, but opportunity will be afforded to take the Indians out of the State and save trouble with the miners that will certainly invade their reservation this summer.

An effort will also be made under a suspension of rules to map out work for the rest of the session, with a view to adjournment. The Democrats are desperately anxious to get a vote on the tariff question before the Cincinnati convention, but with such a small margin above a quorum it is not clear how they can accomplish it, as the Republicans are adverse to tariff tinkering simply for political purposes, and will easily break a quorum.

SUICIDE.

WASHINGTON, June 6—Mr Shorokin Agee Takato, recently appointed Secretary to the Japanese Legation in this city, committed suicide at his apartments this morning. He was found on the floor of his parlor, pistol in hand, having blown his brains out. Members of the legation were greatly shocked. He was 30 years of age, of unusual agreeable manners, and was educated in this country. Before coming to the United States he held several prominent offices in Japan. The only clue to the cause of the suicide was a letter left by the deceased, in which he stated he had been concerned in the insurrection of 1877 in Japan, and had forfeited his honor.

MILWAUKEEE REUNION.

MILWAULEE, June 6—Fully 2,000 ex-soldiers arrived last night and to-day to participate in the reunion which begins to-morrow. The weather, which has been dismally wet for a week, has cleared, and promises to be favorable for the trotting meeting and the parades.

ROBBED.

MILWAUKEE, June 6—George Gasson, a capitalist just down from the Lake Superior mines, was robbed of $2,000 in a house of ill-fame last night. To-night a woman named Howard was arrested with part of the money on her person.

NOMINATING SPEECHES.

General Grant is Presented in a Splendid Manner By Mr. Conkling.

Garfield Nominates Secretary Sherman in a Very Handsome But Modest Way.

The "Plumed Knight" Receives a Befitting Endorsement From Joy, of Michigan.

Mr. Cassoday Makes a Fine Speech in Nominating Mr. Washburne.

CHICAGO, June 6—The Convention hall was packed last night with an audience as enthusiastic as the one on Friday. It was late in the night when the nominating speeches were made. The following are those of Conkling, Joy, Garfield, and Cassoday:

JAMES G. BLAINE.

NOMIANTED BY JAMES F. JOY, OF MICHIGAN.

The Chairman—The roll of States will now be called in the execution of the order of the convention.

The call proceeded without a stop until the secretary came to Illinois. Senator Logan was standing in the aisle, but his standing there meant nothing, and the clerk went on. At the mention of the name "Michigan," James F. Joy, rose to his feet, was recognized by the Chairman, and asked to take his place on the platform. The gentleman took his stand on the reporters' platform and the convention saw before it not a brilliant, but a solid, substantial, hard headed man of wealth, standing, and influence.

The Chairman—The convention will maintain silence.

Mr. Joy—Gentlemen of the convention, I shall never cease to regret that circumstances have been such as to impose the duty upon myself to make the nomination of a candidate to this convention. I have been absent from the country for the past two months, and had but arrived home just before this convention. Since the convention has been in session I have been employed upon the floor all the time. It, therefore, words of mine are important for the candidate who shall be proposeed, they will benefit him but little. I will, however, bring him before the convention in as brief a manner as possible. That it will be in very brief will, I presume, satisfy the convention and the audience, because we are now all impatient for the voting. It was in 1860, I think, that a then young man, born in an old Eastern State, but resident in the State of Maine, entered the House of Representatives. It was at this time when the sky was lowering, when the horizon was filled with clouds, indicating a tempest. It was just before the War. The tempest burst upon the country, and the War ensued, which raged for four long years. Fortunately for us, there were at the helm of the ship of state the right men, and it was manned with a right crew. After the whirlwind of war had raged for four years, the elements of strength in one of the contending parties gave way, and peace at length settled down on the country. Then ensued the contest of reconstruction, which occupied nearly three or four years more. During all that period of time that young man, always brave, always eloquent, applied his talent in all the debates and in all the proceedures which were necessary either to carry on the war or to bring about reconstruction upon a proper basis. And during the period of these controversies his reputation had been until at last when, in 1868, reconstruction had been practically secured, his reputation was towering before the country, and one of the great names of the country had become spread abroad all over the land. It had become a household word. It was familiar in every corner. It was looked up to from every part of the country. That name was the Hon. James G. Blaine, the Senator from Maine. [Cheers]

EMERGING, GROWING, TOWERING,

[The audience did not stop at the usual time, but continued the applause for a minute or two, supplementing it with the waving of handkerchiefs, hats, and umbrellas. There was a lull for a few seconds, and the demonstration seemed to be dying, but some of the alternates arose, followed by a few of the delegates, and then it became evident that there was to be a repetition of the scene of early Saturday morning. After keeping up the din about five minutes, the galleries, much to the surprise of many, heeded the raps of the gavel, and took it into their heads to let Mr. Joy go on, which he did, as follows:]

When the stormy period of Andrew Johnson's time had passed away, or was passing away, and General Grant was nominated by the country for President of the United States, all eyes in the country turned to the Hon. James G. Blaine, who was called upon to canvass the country. He canvassed the country from Maine to the Mississippi, and beyond. He made himself familiar with the great North and the great West. The people in the North and in the great West. And he had about him that wonderful power of attraction which a half century earlier was possessed in the most eminent degree also by another great man of this country; the great son of the great State of Kentucky—Harry Clay. On the second nomination of General Grant in 1872 he was called upon in the same way, and he traversed the country exercising his power, his ability, and his eloquence in the cause of the country over the same extent of this northern border. He had become so well known, the people of the country had become so well acquainted with him, he had fastened them to him by attractions so great, that in the Convention which was held at Cincinnati four years ago, he had become

BECAME FAMILIAR WITH HIM

THE LEADING CANDIDATE OF THE NORTHERN PEOPLE

for the Presidency of the United States. He was the favorite candidate of the State which I represent in this convention. Its delegates went to that convention with a view of urging and securing, if it were possible, his nomination. He came within a few votes of success, when for some reason his column broke, and the result was another nomination, which had not been before the country. You all know the disappointment, you all know perhaps the astonishment, which was created in some sections of the country at that result. In the State which I have the honor to represent upon this floor it was considered almost a calamity to the individual members of the Republican party of that State. They felt it almost as a personal blow. But while he might have been disappointed reasonably in the results when the canvass came on, and when the fight was a close one, and when it was doubtful whether the Republicans would succeed in electing their candidate, although he had been repudiated at the convention, he buckled on his harness, he entered the ranks, he traversed the country, and fought manfully, gloriously, and vigorously until the battle was won, though by a small majority. [Cheers.]

GENERAL GRANT.

NOMINATED BY ROSCOE CONKLING.

When New York was called Senator Conkling left his seat, and, while walking up the aisle toward the platform, was lustily cheered. He took a position on top of one of the reporter's desks near the delegates, and, when he drew himself up and threw back his head in his imperious way, the people in the galleries applauded and waved their handkerchiefs, etc. They kept this up for several minutes, but ceased when the Senator held up his hand for them to keep quiet.

The chairman invited the gentleman to go on the platform, but he said he would remain where he was. When the utmost silence prevailed, Senator Conkling said:

And when asked what State he hails from, our sole reply shall be, he hails from Appomattox [applause and cheers], with its famous apple tree. In obedience to instructions I should never dare to disregard, expressing my own firm conviction, I rise to propose a nomination which the country and the Republican party can grandly win. The election before us is to be the Austerlitz of American politics. [Cries of that's so," "That's it."] It will decide for many years whether the country shall be Republican or Cossack. [Cries of "good, good," and applause.] The supreme need of the hour is not a candidate who can carry Michigan. All Republican candidates can do that. The need is not of a candidate popular to the territories, because they have no vote. [Applause and cries of "Good, good."] The need is of a candidate who can carry doubtful States, [Applause and cries of "good, good."] Not the doubtful States of the North, but the doubtful States of the South, which we have heard, if I understand it aright, ought to take little or no part here, because the South has nothing to give, but everything to receive. [Applause and a voice "good for you."] No, gentlemen, the need that presses upon

THE CONSCIENCE OF THIS CONVENTION

is of a candidate who can carry doubtful States both North and South. And believing that he, more surely than any other man can carry New York against any opponent, and can carry not only the North but several States of the South. New York is for Ulysses S. Grant. (Applause.) Never defeated—(Everybody knows it)—never defeated in peace or in war, his name is the most illustrious borne by living man. (Cheers.)

HIS SERVICES ATTEST HIS GREATNESS,

and the country—nay the world knows them by heart. His fame was born not alone in things written and said, but by the arduous greatness of things done ["Good," and cheers.] And perils and emergencies will search in vain in the future, as they have searched in vain in the past, for any other upon whom the Nation leans with such confidence and trust. [Cheers.] Never having a policy to enforce against the will of the people, he never betrayed a cause or a friend, and the people will never desert or betray him. [Never.] Standing on the highest eminence of human distinction, modest, firm, simple and self-poised, having filled all lands with his renown, he has not only seen the high born and the titled, but the poor and the lowly, in the uttermost ends of the earth rise and uncover before him. He has studied the needs and defects of many forms of government, and he has returned a better American than ever with a wealth of experience and knowledge added to the hard common sense which shone so conspicuously in all the fierce light that beat upon him for sixteen years, the most trying, the most portentious, the most perilous.

Vilified and reviled, truthlessly aspersed by unnumbered presses, not in other lands, but in his own. [Hit 'em again" and applause], assaults upon him have seasoned and strengthened his hold on the public heart. [Loud applause.] Calumny's ammunition has all been exploded; the powder has all been burned once. [Applause] Its force is spent. And the name of Grant [applause] will glitter a bright and imperishable star in the diadem of the Republic [applause] when those who have tried to tarnish that name have mouldered in forgotten graves [loud cheers], and when their memories and their epitaphs have vanished utterly. [Applause]

Never elated by success, never depressed by adversity, he has ever in peace and war, shown the very genius of common sense. [Applause.] The terms he prescribed for Lee's surrender foreshadowed the wisest prophesies and principles of true reconstruction. ["Good," and applause.] Victor in the greatest war of modern times, he quickly signalized his aversion to war and his love of peace by an arbitration of international disputes, which stands the wisest, the most majestic example of its kind in the world's diplomacy. [Loud cheers.] When inflation, at the hight of its popularity and frenzy, had swept it was the veto of Grant which, single and alone overthrew expansion, and cleared the way for specie resumption. [Loud and long-continued applause]. To him, to him, immeasurably more than to any other man, is due the fact that every paper dollar is as good as gold. [Loud applause.]

With him as our leader we shall have no defensive campaign. No! We shall have nothing to explain away. We shall have no apologies to make. The shafts and the arrows have all been aimed at him, and they lie broken and harmless at his feet. Life, liberty, and property will find a safeguard in him. [Cheers] When he said of the colored men in Florida, "Wherever I am they may come also; when he said, he meant that he had the power, the poor dwellers in the cabins of the South should no longer be driven in terror from the homes of their childhood and the graves of their murdered dead. [Loud cheers.] When he refused to receive Dennis Kearney in California, he meant that Communism, lawlessness, and disorder, although it might stalk high-headed and dictate law to a whole city, should find a foe in him. He meant that popular or unpopular he would, hew to the line of right, let the chips fly where they might. [Cheers]

His integrity, his common sense, his courage, his unequaled experience, are the qualities offered to his country. The only argument, the only one that the wit of man or the stress of politics has devised is one which would amaze Solomon, because he thought there was nothing new under the sun. Having tried Grant twice and found him faithful, we are told that we must not even, after an interval of years, trust him again. My countrymen! My countrymen! what stultification does not such a fallacy involve. The American people exclude Jefferson Davis from the public trust. Why? Why? Because he was the arch-traitor and would-be destroyer; and now the same people is asked to ostracise Grant, and not to trust him. Why? Why, I repeat? Because he was the arch-preserver of this country, and because not only in war, but twice as Civil Magistrate, he gave his highest, noblest efforts to the Republic. [Loud applause.] Is this an electioneering juggle, or is it hypocrisy's masquerade? There is no field of human activity, responsibility, or reason in which rational beings object to an agent because he has been weighed in the balance and not found wanting. (Loud applause, on the subsidence of which there were calls of "Time, time," and counter cries of "Go on.") There is no department—(Renewed calls of "Time" and "Go on.") There is, I say, no department of human reason in which sane men reject an agent because making him exceptionally competent and fit. From the man who shoes your horse to the lawyer who tries your cause, the officer who manages your railway or your mill, the doctor into whose hands you give your life, or the minister who seeks to save your soul, what man do you reject because, by his works, you have known him, and found him faithful and fit? [Applause] What makes the Presidential office an exception to all things else in the common sense to be applied to selecting its incumbent? Who dares—who dares to put fetters on that free choice and judgment which is the birthright of the American people. [Loud applause.] Can it be said that Grant has used official power and place to perpetuate his term? He has no place; and official power has not been used for him. [Loud and prolonged cheers.] Without patronage and without emissaries, without committees, without bureaus [laughter and applause], without telegraph wires [cries of "Good," "Good," and applause] running from his house to this Convention, or running from his house anywhere else. [Cries of "Good," "Good" and applause, followed by cries of "Time," "Time," and "Go on," "Go on."] Let me finish. [Cries of "Go on" and "Time."] Let me finish. [More cries and cat calls]

Mr. Bishop, of Montana—Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman—For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. Bishop—I rise to ask the American people to listen to the gentleman when he says, "Let me finish."

The Chairman—The gentleman will proceed unless some member of the convention makes a point of order. No member of the convention has manifested a disposition to do it. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. Conkling—Mr. Chairman, let me say to the Chair that I shall be careful not to exceed the forty minutes which, without objection, were given to those who proposed and seconded the last nomination. (Cries of "Good," "Good," and applause.

I say this man without bureaus, without power, without appliances, without electioneering contrivances, which have made of —(Cries of "Oh! oh!"

A voice—"Syndicate."

Mr. Conkling—Without effort on his part—

A voice—"Machine."

Mr. Conkling—His name is on his country's lips, and he is struck at by the whole Democratic party—(Cries of "Oh! oh!")—because his nomination is the death-blow of Democratic success. He is struck at by others who find an offense and disqualification in the very services he has rendered and the very experience that he has gained. Show me a better man (Cries of "Blaine," "Blaine." Name one. (Cries of "Blaine," and great applause.

While the crowd was amusing itself, Mr Conkling picked up and complacently sucked a lemon.

Mr. Conkling—This doesn't come out of my time, gentlemen, and, therefore, doesn't annoy me. [Laughter.] I was about to say name a better man, and I am answered. But don't point as a disqualification to the very experience which makes this man fit beyond all others. [Applause.] There is no third term in the case, and the pretense will die with the political dogdays that gendered it. [Laughter.] One week after the Democratic Convention will hear the last of this rubbish about a third term. [Cries of "right!" and applause." Nobody, nobody now is really disquieted about a third term [derisive voices, "O no!"] except those hopelessly longing for a first term. [Applause and laughter.] It is the men who long for the first term. [Renewed laughter.] Without effort or intrigue on his part,

HE IS THE CANDIDATE,—

yes, the candidate,—whose friends have threatened to bolt unless——

A man in the gallery—We are not going to bolt. [Confusion, and cries of "O no," "Palmer House."]

Senator Conkling—He is the candidate whose friends have never threatened to bolt unless this convention did as they said. [Cheers and cries of "Bravo!"] He is a Republican who never wavers. [Applause.] He and his friends stand by the creed and the candidates of the Republican party. [Applause.] They hold the rightful rule of the majority as the very essence of their faith [applause,] and they mean to uphold that faith against not only the common enemy, but against the charlatans, jahawkers, tramps, and guerrillas [applause,]—the men who deploy between the lines, and forage now on one side and then on the other. [Applause.] This convention is master of a supreme opportunity. It can name the next President. [Applause and cries of "Blaine."] It can make sure of his election. [Hisses and applause mingle, and considerable disorder,—so much that the speaker was obliged to suspend, saying, "I will wait, I will wait." Then there were cries of "Go on."]

Senator Conkling—Not until you keep quiet I won't. Finally order was restored, and then Senator Conkling resumed:

It can make sure not only of his election, but of his certain and peaceful inauguration. [Cheers.] It can break that power which dominates and mildews the South. It can overthrow the organization whose very existence is a standing protest against progress.

The purpose of the Democratic party is spoils. Its very hope of existence is a solid South. Its success is a menace to order and progress. I say this convention can overthrow that power. It can dissolve and emancipate a solid South. It can speed the Nation in a career of grandeur eclipsing all past achievments. Gentlemen, we have only to listen above the din and look beyond the dust of an hour to behold the Republican party advancing with its ensigns resplendent with illustrious achievements marching to certain victory with its greatest Marshal at its head. [Applause, lasting for about ten minutes.]

JOHN SHERMAN.

NOMINATED BY GEN. GARFIELD.

The chairman—Any further nominations from the State of New York? There being no response the Secretary will proceed with the call of States.

When the State of Ohio was called Senator Garfield rose to address the chair, and was received with loud and long cheering.

Senator Garfield—Mr President, I have witnessed the extraordinary scenes of this Convention with deep solicitude. No emotion touches my heart more quickly than sentiments in honor of a great and noble character; but I have thought as I sat on these seats and witnessed this demonstration that it seemed to me you were the human ocean gathered in this in this circle. I have seen the sea lashed in its fury and tossed into spray, and there is a grandeur that moves the soul of a man when he looks upon it; but I remember that it is the calm level of the sea from which all heights and depths are measured. [Cheers].

When the hour of calm settles on the ocean; when the sunlight bathes it, then the astronomer and surveyor takes the level and measures all terrestrial heights and depths; and, gentlemen of the Convention, when the fervor of our enthusiasm has passed, when the passion of the moment has subsided, it is that calm level of public opinion, below the storm below the passion, from which the great thoughts of a mighty people are to be measured [cries of "Good," and loud applause] and by which they are to be judged. Not here in this brilliant circle where 15,000 men and women are gathered is the destiny of this Republic to be settled for the next four years. [A voice "That's so," and loud applause.] Not here, where I see the enthusiastic faces of 700 odd delegates to cast their lot into the urn and determine the the fate of the Republic; but by 4,000,000 of Republican firesides, where 4,000,000 of voters, with wives and children about them, with calm thoughts of home, with the story of their country, with the story of its life, with the knowledge of the great men that have lived upon it, burning down into their hearts,—there God prepares the destiny that shall determine this mighty question. [Loud cheering.] Not in Chicago, in the heat of June, but in the Republic, in the quiet melancholy days of November, when men think and act in the silence of their best judgment will this question be settled. And now, gentlemen of the Convention, what do we want? [A voice "That's it." Laughter and cheers.] What do we want? Bear with me a moment; hear me for my cause, and for a moment "be silent that you may hear. [Applause.]

Twenty-five years ago this Republic of ours was bearing and wearing the triple chain of bondage. Long familiarity with traffic in the bodies and souls of men had paralyzed and enchained the consciences of a majority of our people; the narrowing and disintegrating doctrine of State sovereignty had paralyzed the noblest and most beneficent powers of the National Government; and the aggressive power of slavery was seizing the virgin Territories of our West, and dragging them into the den of eternal slavery. At that crisis the Republican party was born. It drew its first inspiration from that fire of liberty which God has ligated in every heart, and which no power of slavery has ever been able wholly to extinguish. [Applause] The Republican party was born out of this great and God given impulse, and it came to deliver and save. It entered where the beleaguered and assailed Territories were struggling for life, and it stood beside them and drew about them the great and sacred circle of liberty. They were forever strengthened by their victory, and the Republicans under the leadership of that great man who, on this spot twenty years ago, was made their leader, they entered the National Capital and took their high places there. [Applause] The gleaming light from their banners melted away the shackles of slaves about the Capital, and threw its rays into the darkest corner of every slave pen in Washington [Applause.]

That party entered into the control of the Government, and it found all its noblest functions in bondage; the great National industries, by an impracticable currency, were themselves prostrate, and the streams were so sickly that the Treasury itself was empty, or nearly empty, and the dregs that were in the Treasury were the rags of two thousand corporations filling this country with a circulation that poisoned the life of business everywhere. The Republican party touched all this, threw its protecting arms about the great National industries, and they rose in their might and contributed full coffers to a grateful Government. They filled with the genius of nationality all the great functions of the Government, and made them live again. More than that, they confronted revolution with splendid armies that fought until the mighty contest was ended; but above the storm of battle, and above the roar of the guns, we hear the sweet, calm words of peace that came from the conquering Nation, saying to the Rebels who lay prostrate at their feet, "We take this as our revenge. we ask you to join us in lifting into the forum of the Constitution, to shine forever and ever like the star of God, the simple doctrine of equality to all men before the law." And then returning to our great questions of reconstruction, to our great debt, to our great public obligation, the Republican darty finished its twenty-five years of glory and victory. How shall you do it? You must do it first, my friends, by assailing no Republican. (Applause.) God forbid that I should lay one limitation of worth upon the any distinguished name in the great category of our heroes. If we win this fight—for it is our Thermopylæ this year; we stand on the narrow isthmus, and the little Spartan host must meet all the Persians that Xerxes can bring; the stars in their courses will fight for us; the census that will be taken this month will give us the victory—therefore, say I, to win this victory now we want every vote of every Grant Republican in America and every anti-Grant Republican in American. We want the vote of every Blaine man and every anti Blaine man of every follower of every candidate, or we dare no hope for success. Therefore, say I, gentlemen, brethren, we are to take calm counsel together, and inquire what we shall do. (A voice, "Nominate Garfield," and cheers.)

WE WANT A MAN

whose life and opinions embody all these achievements of which I have spoken. We want a man who, standing as it were on a mountain hight, beneath his foot all the achievements, and in his heart all the love for the glories of past, looks forward to meet the dangers to come. We want him in no spirit of revenge against those that we fought in battle. The Republican party goes to the South with the palms of peace in its hand, and holds it out to every one on this supreme condition; that it shall be admitted forever and forevermore that we were right and they were wrong. On that supreme condition we meet them as brethren, and on any other terms we make no terms forevermore. (Applause.)

Now, gentlemen, not to weary you, I am about to present to you a name for your consideration,—the name of a man who was the comrade, associate, the friend of nearly all these persons whose faces look down upon us in this building here to-night; a man who began his career in the politics of this country twenty-five years ago, whose first service was done in days of peril on the plains of Kansas when the first red drop of that bloody shower began to fall that thickened finally into the deluge of gore of the late Rebellion. He stood by it in Kansas. Then, returning to his seat in the National Legislature, through all the subsequent years, his pathway has been marked by the labors he has performed in every department of lagislation. You ask for this monument. I point you to twenty-five years of National statutes. And I tell you that not one great, beneficent statute upon your books has been placed there without his intelligent and powerful aid. (Applause.) He aided these men to formulate laws that and carried us through the war. His hand was in the workmanship of the statutes that restored and brought back the unity and married calm of States. His hand was in all that great legislation that created the great war currency, that carried us through, but in the still greater work that redeemed the promise of the Government and made it good. And when at last he passed from the halls of legislation into a high executive influence, he displayed that experience, intelligence, fairness and power of balance and poise through a stormy period of two and a half years. With half the public press howling and crying "Crucify him!" he bore himself on unswerved by a single hair from the line of his duty. Handling the great fiscal forces of this Government, and the great business interests of this country, he carried us through in the execution of that law, and effected it without a jar against the false prophecies and the Cassandras of half a continent. He has shown himself able to meet in the calmness of statesmanship all he great emergencies of the Government. For twenty-five years he has trod that peerless hight of public duty, and against all the shafts has bared his breast unharmed. He has stood in the blaze of that fierce light that beats against the throne, and its fiercest ray has found no flaw in his armor, no stain on his shield.—Applause.—I do not present him as a better Republican or a better man than thousands of others that but I present him for your deliberate consideration. I nominate John Sherman, of Ohio. [Applause and cheers, which continued for five minutes, quite a "boom" having been worked up by Mr. Sherman's friends.

RAISED OUR GREAT ARMIES AND NAVIES,

WE HONOR AND REVERE,

A delegate from Mississippi—This is a most disgraceful proceeding.

E. B. WASHBURNE.

NOMINATED BY J. B. CASSODAY.

When the State of Wisconsin was called, J B Cassoday mounted the rostrum, and, after being introduced by the Chairman, said:

Mr President and gentlemen of the Convention: During the exciting and arduous duties of this Convention, I have not occupied to exceed three minutes of your time, notwithstanding I am the chairman of a delegation. And I promise now, if you will respectfully listen for a few moments, not to use up the time of ten minutes allotted to me by two or three minutes.

It is indeed fortunate for our party and civilization that we have so many able statesmen from whom to select our candidates. (Applause.) Far be it from to detract a single syllable from the praise justly due to any; but we live in a vast country, embracing many eminent statesmen whose names have not been presented to this convention. Here are 756 delegates, representing 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 Republican voters, embracing many nationalities, having diverse interests and theories, scattered over 3,000,000 square miles of territory, and hence any view of our duty is incomplete and altogether too narrow which fails to take in the whole field and all the probabilities and improbabilities of a united support in November. (Applause.)

It may be that in France and some other nations, success in Government depends wholly upon the character of the leadership, but in this representative Government it must ever depend largely upon the broad common sense and good judgment of the masses of the people. And hence the truism uttered by our martyred President that, "No one life is a necessity to the existence of the nation." (Cheers.) Behold in these seats, in this very presence, men whose ability and statesmanship have become famous on this and other continents. There is no lack of capacity for leadership, much less of a disposition to lead. What we want most just now is a unity of purpose throughout the entire party for the public good, and that can best be secured not by self-assertion, but by self-negation.

The question is not whose name will elicit the greatest applause at this present moment of time, but what name is so established in the confidence of the people as to allay all opposition in his own party, and secure the greatest number of votes in November. The man of my choice is not a candidate, and has not sought any support from any quarter; but rather repelled it. But let us remember that in the tabernacles of God those are not to be chosen who seek the highest seats and demand the richest crowns, but rather those who empty themselves of all vanity and conceit, and go down into the arena, into the face of death and there are content and labor for the common good. [Cheers.]

Such ought to be the rule in every Republican Convention. Let us not be too sanguine. A comfortable berth is of no account to the passengers when the ship is fast driving upon the rocks. Let us save the ship and take care of the berths afterwards. Our enemies are in posession of both Houses of Congress. They will demand and claim the right to dictate the methods and the tests of the Electoral count. With that object in view, they have purposely ommitted, as the distinguished Senator from New York the other day very emphatically told them all

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY GUARANTEES,

With an inordinate lust for executive power and patronage on their part we have nothing to gain, nothing to expect from a decision of theirs in case of a repetition of 184 to 185, nor from an Electoral Commission of their choosing. The only security is to make certain at the polls every doubtful State by the choice of a candidate around whom the entire party can solidly join and march on to victory. That man ascertained with reasonable certainty, it becomes the bounden duty of all to secure the success of the party, and through that party the salvation of our country, by making that man the nominee of the convention. No other man can reasonably insist upon the nomination, and such a man has no right to decline it. In the judgment of some in this convention, and many with cool heads all over the land, there are two men, (neither of whom are candidates) who possess all of these requisite qualities. One is Elihu B. Washburne, of Illinois (loud cheering, clapping of hands, and waving of hats and handkerchiefs), and the other is George F. Edmunds, of Vermont. (Applause.) Fully realizing that a divided party at the close of this Convention forebodes defeat in November, and a united party at the close of this Convention insures success in November, and looking over the whole field, I take that man whose history is familiar to you all, and who at the breaking out of the War sought out an obscure individual in Galena, led him up to Springfield, up to the mountain of his glory, and stands by his side, as one of his chief admirers and friends to-day. And therefore I nominate Mr. Washburne, of Illinois. (Loud applause.)

Eating Crow.

Indianapolis Journal.

A correspondent asks us the origin of the phrase "eating crow." As the time is near at hand when a good many plates will be served from that unsavory dish, it may be of general interest to read of it, as told some twenty five years ago in the Knickerbocker Magazine. An old farmer who lived somewhere on the Hudson, was in the habit of taking in a few summer boarders to eke out the earnings of the farm. Like most farmers who take summer boorders, and have, at the same time a convenient market for their produce, this thrifty successor of the Knickerbackers was accustomed to send all the best products of his farm and garden, and the choicest butter from his dairy, to market, often returning from town with inferior articles which he had purchased at a greatly reduced price, safely hidden away in his wagon box, to be smuggled into the kitchen and palmed off upon the confiding boarders as home grown products. Finally some of the boarders began to grumble. They had boarded in the country before, and knew what fresh vegetables and berries, new laid eggs and "grass" butter were, and they were conscious of the fact that they were not getting what they were entitled to. To all their complaints the farmer returned answer that they were entirely "too pertickeler," that it was foolish and sinful to pamper one's appetite; that ordinary food was best in the long, and winding up with the remark: "I kin eat anything; I kin eat a crow." This last remark was repeated so often that it made an impression on one of the boarders, who, being out shooting one day, and having popped over a crow, determined to put the gastronomic ability of his host to the test. He carried the bird home, had the cook dress it, and gave her instructions to cook it for dinner. Then fearful that the hardy farmer might have stomach even for such a dish, and so make good his boast, he slipped into the kitchen while the bird was cooking, and seasoned it liberally with Scotch snuff. In time the dish was sent to the table, and the boarder placed it before the host, with the remark: "Now, you have been steadily proclaiming your ability to eat a crow. Here is one cooked to a turn. Try it." The farmer was taken entirely back, but had too much pluck to acknowledge himself beaten without a trial. He accordingly attacked the dish, with the remark: "I kin do it." At the second bite he repeated: "I kin eat crow," and, as he suddenly suspended the operation of cutting the third mouthful, and began to retreat toward the door, he added, "but dang me if I hanker arter it!"

REMOVAL!

AND GREAT

CLOSING OUT SALE

OF

$75,000 WORTH

DRY GOODS, MILLINERY & CARPETS.

McKey & Bro.

Having leased for a term of years the building now being erected by A. P. Bennett, Esq., on the corner of Milwaukee & River streets in this city, WILL COMMENCE IMMEDIATELY the greatest closing out sale ever known in the mercantile annals of Wisconsin.

Description of McKey & Bro.'s New Store.

The block will be 42 feet in front by 130 feet in depth, three stories high with a basement. It is to be built of Milwaukee pressed brick with Joliet cut sand stone trimmings, and when finished it will be the handsomest building in the city.—McKEY & BRO. will occupy the whole of the first story and basement. The front will be finished in black and gold, with French plate glass windows. A series of circular windows over the shelving on the River street side will furnish a uniform volume of light for the whole store.—The counters and shelving are to be made after the most approved modern designs. The front of the store, 100x42, is to be used for the display of Dry Goods and Millinery, while the Carpet department will occupy the rear part, 30x42, raised three steps above the front level. The basement with a high ceiling and admirably lighted by numerous windows in front and rear, and along the River street side will be utilized for storage and wholesale purposes. The office will be in the southwest corner, and is to be provided with a fire proof vault and appropriate furniture. This will be, when completed, the most elegant mercantile establishment in the State, and having been built expressly for a first class Dry Goods Store, without regard to expense, it will be absolutely perfect in all its appointments.

TO THE PEOPLE!

Having concluded to open their new store with an entirely fresh stock of goods, McKey & Bro. have determined to CLOSE OUT in the meantime every dollar's worth of DRY GOODS, MILLINERY and CARPETS now on hand.

This sale is absolutely peremptory and will involve the GREATEST SACRIFICE of goods ever known in the West. McKey & Bro. fully realize the necessity of cutting down prices in order to effect so large a sale in so short a time. They will, therefore, contemporaneously with the publication of this announcement make a general and comprehensive reduction in prices in every department of the house.

Every person in Rock county needing supplies of Dry Goods, Millinery or Carpets is invited to participate in the benefits of this great sale. No such opportunity is likely to occur again IN THE LIFE TIME of any one now living. This is no humbug gotten up for diversion or to deceive the people, but is on the contrary a BONA FIDE sale, made imperative by the circumstances already narrated. Every Mechanic, Artisan, Farmer and everybody engaged in business or professional pursuits can and ought to save money by buying their goods of McKey & Bro during the next 60 days. The store now occupied by McKey & Bro., being Nos. 24 and 26 Main street, is to rent from and after September 1, 1880.

THE READY FAMILY SOAP MAKER:

LEWIS' LYE

98 PER CENT. PURE.

(Patented.)

FINELY POWDERED.

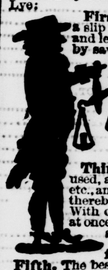

HIGHLY PERFUMED.

The strongest and purest Lye made. Will make 12 pounds of the best Perfumed Hard Soap in 20 minutes without boiling.

The best water-softener made.

The best disinfectant.

The following are some of the advantages obtained by using Lewis' 98 Per Cent. Powdered Lye:

First. It is packed in an iron can with a slip or removable lid, easily taken off and leaving the contents exposed, thereby saving the trouble, annoyance, and danger (from flying particles), as with other Lyes, which, being solid in the cans, must be broken with a hammer to get the Lye out.

Second. It being a fine powder, you can remove the lid and pour out all the contents, being always ready for use.

Third. A teaspoonful or more can be used, as in water-softening, scrubbing, etc., and the lid returned to the can, and thereby save the balance of contents. With other Lyes all must be dissolved at once and used in a short time, or the strength is gone.

Fourth. Absolute purity. Free from all adulterations.

Fifth. The best Soap can be made in from ten to twenty minutes with this Lye.

Sixth. No failure is possible in making Soap with this Lye when the simple directions given are followed.

Seventh. One can of this Powdered Lye is equal to twenty pounds of Sal Soda or Washing Soda.

Eighth. One can of this Lye will saponify one pound more of grease than any other Concentrated Lye, Ball Potash, or Saponifier.

Ninth. This Lye is 2% per cent. stronger than any other Lye or Potash.

Tenth. One to two teaspoonfuls will soften a tub of the hardest water.

Eleventh. One teaspoonful will thoroughly cleanse Sinks, Drains, or Closets.

Invaluable for killing Roaches, Mice, Rats, etc. The best article for washing Trees.

PREMATURE DECLINE, &c., &c

Premature Decline; Consumption; Bronchitis; Asthma; bleeding from the Lungs; Palpitation, Feeble and Interrupted Action of the Heart; Dull or Sluggish Action of the Liver; Dyspepsia; Flatulence, and all Wasting Diseases; Weakness and Trembling of the Limbs, and Want of vitality in any organ, or Disease caused by such want of vitality
ARE ALL SUCCESSFULLY AND RAPIDLY TREATED BY THIS REMEDY.

DR. HOWE'S TESTIMONY.
PITTSFIELD, ME., March, 1872.
MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS,
Dear Sir—During the past two years, I have given your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites a fair though somewhat severe trial in my practice, and am able to speak with confidence of its effects. In restoring persons suffering from emaciation and the debility following Diphtheria, it has done wonders. I constantly recommend its use in all affections of the throat and lungs. In several cases considered hopeless, it has given relief, and the patients are fast recovering. Among these are consumptive and old bronchial subjects, who e diseases have resisted the other modes of treatment. For impaired digestion, and in fact for debility from any cause, I know of nothing equal to it. Its direct effect in strengthening the nervous system, renders it suitable for the majority of diseases.
I am, sir, yours truly. WM. S. HOWE, M. D.

Dr. V. CLARENCE PRICE —HAS—
Visited Janesville
EIGHTEEN YEARS.
HAS met with unparalleled success in the treatment of all Chronic Diseases
—OF THE—
THROAT,
LUNGS,
HEART,
STOMACH, LIVER.

Head, nerves, kidneys, bladder, womb, and blood affections of the urinary organs, gravel, scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, &c.
Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.
My practice not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

A MILKY OCEAN.

The Phenomenon as Encountered by a French Frigate, Near Aden.

From the London Times.

The phenomenon of a milky sea has been known to occur in certain parts, but has not been very thoroughly scrutinized. Some have considered the luminous appearance in question an electrical effect in thunder storms, others have attributed it to cadaveric decomposition of marine animals and plants; others to abundant spawn, with fishes moving about in it. But the truth appears to be that it results from an immense accumulation of animalculæ capable of becoming phosphorescent, spontaneously or by friction. Some interesting information of the subject (of an exact character) has been lately published by Lieutenant Pornain, of the French iron clad L'Armide, which, in February last met with a milky sea in the passage from Point de Galle to Aden. The nights of February 9, 10, 12 and 13 were characterized by the phenomenon in all its splendor, the ship during this time traversing 660 miles (1,100 kilometers) in the mean latitude of 12 degrees north, between the meridians of 61 degrees and 51 degrees east longitude. There was no thunder storm, the sky was clear, the moon new, the barometer, thermometer and hygrometer were regular, and a gentle northeast monsoon was blowing. The temperature of the surface of the water was constant at twenty-five degrees.

The sea was like a snow-colored field in a clear night; and all trace of undulations was lost sight of. The milky look was hardly disturbed by the motion of the ship and working of the screw (which shows that the layer had considerable thickness) By day all disappeared, but the hue of the sea was somewhat altered. Looked at attentively over the ship's side at night the water was seen to contain an enormous number of luminous particles pressed close together, and more brilliant close to the side (where disturbed.) Some 400 of these corpuscles (one or two centimeters long) could be counted in a bucket holding ten liters of the water. Drawn out, these were seen to be of gelatinous substance, which quickly dried and disappeared, and leaving a dark globule one millimeter in diameter, which in a microscope presented a transparent ovoid animalcule, which was filled with eggs and moving its fins and tentacles incessantly. A drop of water added to the dark globule brought back its luminosity; and when the creature was bruised in the hand it gave a bright mark, which was quickly extinguished and which had no smell.

The milky water kept till day and looked at in the dark, shows no luminosity, even though agitated; nor does the water procured by day and brought into darkness. It remains to be determined what causes the luminosity of those animalculæ, and information is also desirable as to the position of the various milky seas on the globe, the times of their appearance, and whether they persist in the same place or not, etc. Several of the officers on board the L'Armide had witnessed the phenomenon before, but never so brilliant or so continuous. The L'Armide in going out had passed thirty leagues further north in February, 1878, without encountering anything of the kind.

MISS CLINTON'S CRICKETS.

A Young Lady Who Keeps a Hundred of Them on Her Hearth.

From the New York Sun.

Miss Lucille Clinton, a handsome young artist, who leads a kind of hermit life in her studio, at Broadway and Eighteenth street, is in love with crickets and cats. About ten years ago Miss Clinton, being then a young—very young—school girl read Dickens' story of "The Crickets on the Hearth." Miss Clinton was so affected by the story that she determined to have a cricket at any cost. She hunted the fields days and weeks before she heard a cricket, and it was a long time before she did hear the first cricket that she was able to find and capture one, so deceptive is the voice and so shy are the movements of the cricket. Then it was a long time again before the young admirer of crickets learned enough about the wants and habits of those sprightly creatures to be able to carry them through the winter alive and bring up the young in the spring. She was very patient, though, and now what Miss Clinton doesn't know about crickets isn't worth knowing. She has a large "terny" full of crickets, and a large quantity of eggs are expected to produce a good many more crickets if no misfortune happens.

Last evening Miss Clinton gave a cricket soiree, having invited a number of persons in to hear the crickets sing. The concert was given by about 100 stalwart crickets. The listeners, all but Miss Clinton, were ready to make affidavit that all the crickets sang exactly alike and dreadfully out of tune, But Miss Clinton was equally positive that each cricket had a voice that differed from the voices of all the other crickets; and she ought to know. "Every time I go to the country," said the interesting young artist, "I spend most of the time cricketing. I'm glad I wasn't in the country yesterday and the day before, for I would surely have been sunstruck while looking for crickets. I have already been prostrated twice while cricketing. When I am riding through the country, whether it is in my own conveyance or in a stage, I always have to stop if I hear a cricket. Sometimes I make the other passengers awfully angry by making the driver wait while I go off into a field to look for a cricket. They will say I am crazy, and that there is no cricket there at all. But I always find him, and when I bring him back they say I was right, and then they all begin to like crickets from that time. I often tame them so that they will creep up my arm to the shoulder—I mean outside, you know. My cat likes the crickets almost as well as I do I couldn't go to sleep if I didn't hear them singing."

Very Fine Writing.

London Telegraph.

There is an extraordinary form of calligraphic mania of which the chief symptom is a desire to compress into the smallest possible space the greatest number of words. At the exhibition opened at Dusseldorf a few days ago a gentleman shows a postal card upon which is written by hand the whole of the first three books of the "Odyssey," while the remaining space, such as it is, is filled with a transcript of a long debate which took place in the German Parliament the whole containing 33 000 words. Feats of the same kind have often, however, been achieved before, and none, perhaps, is more remarkable than that "rare piece of work brought to pass by Peter Bales, an Englishman," in the reign of Elizabeth namely, the whole Bible written in a volume containing as many leaves as a full sized edition, but fitting into a walnut. Pictures, of which all the lines and shading are made up of minute handwriting, are not uncommon in the museums of the curious, and in St. John's College, Oxford, is preserved a portrait of Charles I, in which the engraved lines, as they seem to be, are really microscopic calligraphy, the face alone containing all the book of psalms, with the creeds and some forms of prayer besides. How old this species of "curious idleness" may be it is hard to say, but at any rate we know the ancients were as subject to the mania as the moderns, for Pliny records that Cicero possessed a Homer, the "Iliad" only, that shut up into a hazel nut, and other writers of antiquity record such wonderful but preposter exploits as the inscribing with the naked eye a hexameter line of Greek upon the surface of a single grain of millet.

Imitations.

To protect the public against Imitations and Fraud we caution all purchasers of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS
to see that the word CAPCINE on the label is correctly spelled. Do not allow some other plaster to be palmed off under a similar sounding name, with the assurance that it is the same thing or as good. Bear in mind that the only object such vendor can have is the fact that they can buy imitations at prices less than half the that of genuine, and they hope by this substitution to gain a small additional profit.

Extract from Report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue;
TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., January 26, 1880.
Messrs. LAWRENCE & MARTIN, 111 Madison St., Chicago, Ills:
GENTLEMEN: I have received a "certified formula" giving the ingredients and relative proportions used in the manufacture of an article which you advertise and sell under the name of "TOLU, ROCK and RYE." This compound, according to your formula, in the opinion of this office, would have a sufficient quantity of the BALSAM OF TOLU to give it all the advantages ascribed to this article in pectoral complaints, while the whisky and the syrup constitute an emulsion rendering the compound an agreeable remedy to the patient.
In the opinion of this office, an article compounded according to this formula may properly be classed as a medicinal preparation under the provisions of Schedule A, following Section 3,437, U. S Revised Statutes, and when so stamped may be sold by Druggists, Apothecaries and other Persons without rendering them liable to pay special tax as liquor dealers.
Yours Respectfully, (Signed) GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner.

—Dr. Warren is back from Washington, and is cordially greeted.

—Miss Gavin has changed the date of her readings to one week from to-night.

—Hon. A. P. Lovejoy and wife sailed on the Bothnia, Wednesday last, in good health and spirits.

—Mrs. Wadsworth, wife of Conductor Wadsworth, is in the city for a day, which she is spending with Mrs. Colvin.

—The money order department here issued last week $1295.47 worth of orders and paid $1,439.94. Good enough.

—General Robinson, of New York, spent Sunday in the city with friends. He is attending the Chicago Convention.

—William Lamphere, a moulder at the Harris Works, had his foot badly burned by molten iron slopping onto it Saturday night —Mrs. Cannon, of Montana, sister-in-law of Wm. Cannon, is in the city, enroute for Paris, where she expects to spend the summer.

—Horseback riding is becoming more and more popular here. This morning a company of eight ladies and gentlemdn galloped through the streets for an early ride.

—The Beloit district convention of the Congregational churches holds its annual session at Geneva this week, commencing to-night and closing Wednesday. Rev. T. P. Sawin will represent Janesville.

—The Monroe Express, which leaves Milwaukee at 4 p. m., will not leave that city until 6 p. m. on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, which will give visitors two hours more time to attend the festivities in connection with the reunion at Milwaukee.

—A Beaver Dam paper announces that D. A. Lowber, formerly of Janesville, and now of Waupun, has struck it big in Colorado, the mine in which he has an interest having a vein which assays about $10,000 to the ton. We hope it's so, but wait for more full confirmation.

—Clark & Hield are building a large hay barn near the Northwestern round house, and are going to put in a press, and make ready for handling a good many bales. The building is 48 by 150 feet with 28 feet posts, and an addition 57 feet long for the power, press and storage.

—Colonel Charles Noyes, of San Antonio, Texas, was in the city to-day on his way to Milwaukee to attend the reunion. He was a member of the Thirteenth, and his old comrades here rejoice to see him again. He has changed greatly since the days of old, having grown several inches taller, and several feet more in circumferance, but is as good natured and jolly as ever.

A NEW PASTOR.

Father Doyle has resigned the pastorate of St. Patrick's church, and the Archbishop has appointed Rev. E. M. McGinity, of Monroe, to fill the vacancy.

Newly furnished, everything the best, ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK.

A BREAK IN THE FLUME.

About 4 o'clock this morning a portion of the flume at H. A. Doty's mill gave way with a crash, and the water poured out with a gush carrying the timbers with it. The breach is about twenty feet in length. Workmen commenced at once repairing the damage, and it is expected that by to-morrow the flume will be all right again.

TOBACCO SALES.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 6 o'clock last night stood at 74 degrees above; at 1 o'clock a m to-day at 57 degrees above; at 7 o'clock a m at 58 degrees above; and at 1 o'clock p m at 72 degrees above. Cloudy.

The indications to-day are for the upper lake region, rising barometer, winds mostly westerly, clearing weather, stationary or higher temperature.

SUNDAY SNEAKERY.

Sometime yesterday the residence of D. T. Ross in the town of Janesville, a few miles from the city, was entered by thieves, who succeeded in carrying away some valuables including sixty or seventy dollars in money. The family were visiting at some neighbor's at the time, and the loss was not discovered until their return home. No arrests have been made, and it will be hard work, doubtless to track up the offenders.

WISCONSIN PATENTS.

The following patents were issued from the United States Patent Office to citizens of Wisconsin, for the week ending June 5, 1880. Reported for the Gazette by S. A. Hudson, Solicitor of Patents, Lappin's block, Janesville, Wis.:

Swarm catcher—John W Bailey, Green Lake.

Clutch for bow strings—Charles Beard, Elroy.

Harrow—Charles W. Page, assignor to I. P. Williams, Arena.

Bumper—William V. Perry, Beaver Dam.

Lacing belts—Oscar C. Pomeroy, assignor to G. D. Gates, Portage.

Drag sewing machine—Samuel F. Steele, Baraboo.

Knot tyer for self binders—William Stephens, New Richmond.

Vent for beer barrels—Otto Zwietusch, Milwaukee.

A SURPRISE.

The "Telegram and Gazette," New London, Conn., says. "A matter that now is exciting more than ordinary surprise, is the manner in which Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure, and other of Warner's Safe Remedies have leaped into popularity; they are a positive success."

CLEAR THE TABLE.

Close of the Fourth Year of the Round Table—A Sprightly Programme and a Pleasant Social.

The members of the Round Table held their closing session Saturday night, partaking of the nature of a reunion. The stormy condition of the night, and threatening weather, prevented many from attending, so that the attendance was much lighter than it would have been or should have been.

Rev. T. P. Sawin was named as the manager of the evening. The programme opened with a pleasing duet by Mrs. H. A. Smith and Mr. Sweet, with Mrs. Jones as accompanist.

Rev. A. Lee Royce, the President of the Round Table, gave his annual address, in which he congratulated the Club on having so successfully carried through their four years course of study. The change of location had caused an increase of attendance. The changes in the manner of conducting the exercises by having alternate meetings of a conversational nature, and by having a manager to take charge each evening, had worked for good and caused more interest. It was a matter of congratulation that the society should thus flourish in a city which was not a college town. The thanks were due to the Executive Committee, to Pliny Norcross, Esq., to Mr. Haire for having written so many press notices, and to others too numerous to name. The ladies had done much to help the society. Out of 68 papers presented the ladies had written 25, and they were papers which would compare favorably with any.

Mr. J. P. Haire presented a brief history of the Round Table, written in a very spicy manner. During the four years the attendance at the 82 sessions had averaged about 80 persons, and 347 studies had been given by 72 persons.

Mr. J. C. Metcalf spoke on the utility of literature; how it linked the past with the present, and opened up the future, giving us the benefit of the experiences and inspirations of others.

"The Literature of the Pulpit" was the topic handled by Rev. Mr. Chapell. He divided it into three classes, the theological literature, necessary and proper; second, that literature which had been produced by the clergy because there were none others to produce it, as in times past when they were the custodians of learning; a third class, produced by preachers who had either forgotten how to preach, or never knew how, and who had neglected their real work for the purpose of dabbling in secular matters. The first class would always exist, and ought to. The second ought now to diminish, and the third should disappear altogether.

Messrs. Helms and Kent gave a charming duet with the saxophone and cornet which called forth hearty applause.

Rev. T. P. Sawin spoke on "Our Aims and Our Future." He spoke of the high words of commendation he had heard from various parts of the country, showing that the Round Table had won a fame from Boston to the far West. The future looked bright and the aim should still be to gain a better knowledge of all true literature.

Miss Carrie Zeininger, gave a reading of Lady Clare.

Mr B F Dunwiddie spoke of "Our Absent Members." He paid pleasing tributes to Rev George Wallace, General Bintliff, Prof Van Cleve, Rev J W Sanderson, and wife, Prof Woolett, Prof Knuesley, Prof Filmore, Rev Mr Jackson, Mrs Beale, Miss Carle, Miss Dunton, Miss Chittenden, now Mrs Buffum, Rev Mr Wheeler, Rev Mr Richardson, Miss Brace, and others, and spoke tenderly of Miss Goodell the first and only one who has gone to the far beyond.

Mr. Sawin stated that he had received letters from Rev Mr Wallace and General Bintliff, and also one from Prof Van Cleve, which he read.

Stanley B Smith handled "The Ludicrous in Literature." It was merry grouping of many mirth provoking incidents and features of authors and letters, and kept the listeners in a jolly mood for the five minutes allotted him.

Rev. Jenk Ll. Jones paid a fitting tribute to "Woman in Literature," and gave a careful and discriminate outline of her merits.

"The Literature of the Press" was the next handled. It was paid the tribute of being full of life and vigor, strongly formative both of language and of thought, and as a great help and enthusiastic urger on to other phases of literature.

Rev. H. Faville spoke of the literature of our own land. He briefly divided it into historical periods, and pronounced this as an age of publication rather than of creation.

Mrs. H. A. Smith gave a pleasing solo as a closing to the programme, and the Round Table was declared adjourned.

A social followed, and in an adjoining room ice cream, strawberries, cake and cold water formed the banquet of which most of those in attendance on the exercises, partook.

LETTERS FROM ELSEWHERE.

The following letters were mislaid and were consequently not read at the Round Table last Saturday night, but will be perused with interest by all the members and friends:

DARLINGTON, Wis., May 26, '80.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 21st inst. was duly received. I attended the first meeting of the Round Table, assisted in the organization, was present I believe at every session, when I was not absent from the city, during my residence in Janesville. The inspiration which one receives from a more intimate communion with the best minds our race has produced, than ordinary reading and study brings to us has, I think, been most marked in the history of the members of the Round Table. I know that the influence of the work I did for the two literary societies of Janesville materially enriched my own life, and gave to it aspirations for good which I think would not otherwise have been possible. I regret that I cannot be with you at your closing exercises for the year. I trust you will have a pleasant and profitable meeting.

Yours truly,
JAMES BINTLIFF.

WATERLOO, N. Y.,
May 28, 1880.

Please accept my thanks for your kind invitation to be present at the reunion of the Round Table. I am very sorry that I cannot be present on the occasion, which I am sure will be both pleasant and profitable. I regret also that a necessary absence from home has postponed my reply until to-day.

If you have future opportunity to extend my hearty congratulations to the officers and members of the Round Table I wish you would do so. I have greatly missed our very refreshing evenings and have heard of the continued success of the association with a desire and longing for such "feasts of reason" as I was wont to enjoy.

We are to have erected here this summer a commodious public library building and I have no doubt, we shall be able to organize something like a Round Table, to put into it. Will you please send me a copy of the GAZETTE reporting your meeting. I am, Very truly yours,
GEORGE WALLACE.

The Western Favorite Theatrical Company, Chas. Forbes, proprietor and manager, will return to our city and give us one grand entertainment on Saturday evening, June 12, at which time they will render the great comic comedy, Asa Whitcomb. Also give a grand matinee on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. Admission 35 cents. Reserved seats 35 and 50 cents, Children under 10 years, 15 cents. Reserved seats for sale at Moseley's bookstore.

The New York Express speaks as follows:

"Asa Whitcomb, at Wood's Theatre, by the irrepressible New England comedian; Mr. Sullivan, has been convulsing crowded audiences during this week. Fun and humor characterize the play throughout, and his broad, facial wit, has proved a positive hit, and gains the unqualified approval of the spectators. To witness the quaint performances of this time honored comicality is certainly refreshing, and calls us back to our boyish days, and makes us forget the age of inflation and Wall street high-flying speculations."

Excessive Heat

and improper food at this season of the year may speedily carry you to the grave. Parker's Ginger Tonic should always be kept in the house, as it is unequalled for nursing mothers with teething children, and not only cures Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera, Cholera Infantum, Colic, Cramps, etc., but prevents these dangerous attacks By its corrective action on the digestive apparatus it cures Headache, Indigestion, Nervousness, Palpitation of the heart, Wakefulness, Neuralgic Pains, Liver Disorders, Low Spirits, Sour stomach and all other symptoms and forms of Dyspepsia, regulates the Bowels, and enables you to enjoy the fruits and vegetables of the season. Buy a 50 cent or $1 00 bottle and try it. Sold by all first-class druggists.

CITY NOTICES

—Nash & Son have bought Kellogg's berries, supposed to be about 300 bushels, and will receive them fresh from the vines twice every day during the season. They will sell them by the quart or bushel so cheap that all can buy. Please leave orders early for festivals or canning, and they will guarantee prices and quality. All kinds of vegetables constantly on hand. Oranges and lemons by the box or dozen, a speciality. Choice uncanvased hams, shoulders, dried beef, and all kinds of family groceries, may be found at their Refrigerator Store, three doors west of express office.

I have derived much benefit from using Fellows' Hypophosphites in chronic constipation. JOHN B. MOORE, CIRCUS!

There is a circus advertisement in a Minnesota paper that beats all of them for romance in its cuts. The picture referred to is that of an elephant walking to the top of the circus tent on a single wire, waving aloft an American flag held in its trunk. The only balancing pole the elephant seems to have is his tail and trunk. Thousands of people are pictured on the ground below, looking up with mouths open, and the pirate in the ticket wagon is selling tickets rapidly. It is not the mission of this paper to doubt statements of circus men, or to throw a cloud over their reputation for veracity, but we will bet a hound dog against a giraffe that no elephant can walk to the top of a circus tent on a wire. When the day arrives they will say the elephant has cast a shoe, or had the colic, and can't walk.—Peck's Sun.

The above is a good illustration of the way Janesville Clothing Merchants advertise, present company of course excepted, but the cut mentioned; fails to fully represent some of the wonderful inducements offered—on paper—by the great establishments of our city. If there are humbug circuses there are certainly humbug clothing stores, with their sideshows out in front—usually the principal feature—blowers and solicitors at the door, &c. An old time clown probably writes some of the advertisements, as no one else would ever think of resurrecting the ancient expressions used, and it must please the oldest inhabitants to see in print at the present time, the slang phrases and sayings of their boyhood days. We are running a Clothing Store that performs everything advertised or money refunded, and nine years' experience of the present firm, has demonstrated to our entire satisfaction, that the majority of people like this style of doing business, but on this subject we will see you later.
